CONCEPT PAPER

Nomination of Inspired Teachers by Central Universities for In-Residence Programme at Rashtrapati Bhavan

Concept of an Inspired Teacher -

The educational renaissance in India will take place by listening to, and learning from Inspired Teachers. These teachers trigger an insatiable desire among the students to learn, explore, and push the frontiers of knowledge. They make special effort where possible to link knowledge to practice. They help students understand social realities, make them empathetic and at the same time don't try to stereotype them. They are secular in their outlook. They help bring out the best among weak and strong students. They trigger lateral learning among students. They don't mind acknowledging that sometimes some students may know more than a teacher. They reward such insights and acknowledge their inadequacies. They try to link nature, society, culture and institutions in different disciplines. They don't see disagreements as a sign of disrespect. They use different strokes for different balls, as if in a game of cricket. That is, they use different ways of helping different students depending upon their learning blocks or proclivities. They don't restrict to syllabus and go beyond it when needed. They encourage even undergraduate students to write papers and don't take undue credit of the work that students do.

Attributes of an Inspired Teacher -

- Who considers both positive and negative sides of students
- Who understands the limitations of a student and works on the positives (teach the weakest student and benchmark his understanding of the subject and not just feel happy if only majority has understood the subject)
- Who gauges the level of different students and accordingly changes his style and delivery
- Who can convey his confidence (effective Communication/ ability to transfer the knowledge) to students

- Who considers all students equal - does not discriminate on any ground other than merit when needed
- Who does not stick to just the syllabus and classroom but opens extra mural learning opportunities
- Who is willing to help and guide students beyond classrooms and schools
- Who has a practical style of teaching (and encourages experiments)
- Who understands students' mind/psychology and can modify him/herself accordingly
- Who is punctual and has efficient class control ability
- Who has knowledge (of subject and off subject) and is willing to learn himself and show that he learns
- Who encourages lateral learning among students as well
- Who understands that thinking, knowledge, education and learning are all linked and which to focus more on and when
- Who follows what he preaches, can demonstrate ethical conduct and share values in addition to imparting knowledge
- Who can be an example in himself / herself by actions and not by words
- Who shares interesting anecdotes and experiences to inspire and motivate students and provide them values
- Who engages with parents of students as well when needed
- Who uses graphics/sketches, drawings and other multimedia tools as a teaching method
- Who encourages case study based teaching
- Patience in teacher is very vital, does not lose patience when the same doubt arises in the mind of students many times
- Strong introduction and conclusion, helps in proper wrapping up of the context of the class, not just the content
- Who encourages asking questions in the class
- Teacher who teaches sometimes in natural surroundings, uses extra mural means to engage with real life related events, situations, challenges
- Teachers who gives freedom to his students to decide the chronology of chapters and topics
- Teachers who inspire students to bring out the teacher in them

- Teacher who gives extra time to individual student interested in digging deeper into a particular topic
- Teacher who would even allow students from other classes to sit and learn in his class
- Teaches how to learn and assimilate knowledge, not just remember it
- Teaches how to breakdown problems into sub-units, and then build comprehensive understanding of the subject.
